HISTORICAL SKETCH

IN June, 1858, the First Congregational Church of Chicago opened a Mission Sunday school on West Washington street, near Wood, and in the following autumn erected a plain wooden building, designed with reference to its possible use, at some future time, as a place of worship. ¶ In 1859, by an agreement made between the officers of the First Church and the Board of Directors of the Chicago Theological Seminary, the building was removed, at the expense of the Seminary, to its grounds, corner of Reuben street (now Ashland boulevard) and Washington street, and enlarged at a cost of $1,200. It was stipulated that the ownership of the building should be conveyed to a Congregational church whenever one should be formed in that sparsely settled neighborhood. In October, 1859, the Seminary took possession of it, while the main audience room was devoted to mission uses on the Sabbath. ¶ On the first Sabbath in January, 1860, the Seminary professors, Haven, Fisk and Bartlett, commenced holding regular Sabbath services in the chapel. ¶ On the 18th of April following, a meeting was called with reference to the formation of a church. It was unanimously voted to proceed at once in the matter. A committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements. At a meeting held May 7, this committee reported a Confession of Faith and Covenant, and also recommended that the rules of the church government be substantially the same as those laid down in "Punchard, on Congregationalism." This recommendation was adopted. ¶ The Council for the organization of the Union Park Congregational Church convened in the Seminary chapel on the 22nd of May, 1860. It was composed of pastors and delegates from the Congregational churches of Chicago. Rev. Jeremiah Porter was chosen moderator, and Rev. J. H. Dill, scribe. The Rev. Dr. W. W. Patton expressed the fellowship of the churches. Nineteen persons whose names are given on page 4, entered into covenant with the church. C. H. Stoughton was elected deacon. ¶ The Seminary professors continued to supply the pulpit until the first Sabbath in October, 1866. They were succeeded by the Rev. Dr. Helmer, of Milwaukee. He was installed December 20, 1866. ¶ In 1865 the church building was removed from the north to the south side of Washington street, corner of Ashland avenue, and remodeled and enlarged. It was again enlarged in 1867, but was burned to the ground on the night of February 21, 1869. The corner stone of the present building was laid August 7, 1869. It was dedicated November 12, 1871. It cost about $200,000.
